

BIOGRAPHY

Carolyn A. Lubenau is an enrolled member of the Snoqualmie Indian Tribe. She has been an active member of the Tribe her entire life and is carrying on the long-standing family tradition of service to the Tribe. In May of 2013, she was elected as the Snoqualmie Indian Tribe's Chairwoman. Previously, she served on the Tribal Council as Vice Chairwoman and was active in various Tribal committees throughout the years. Chairwoman Lubenau is a member of the National Association of Parliamentarians and retired in 2012 from the Boeing Company after a 42 year career in the Information Technology field as a Senior Business Analyst.

Chairwoman Lubenau is active in protecting and preserving the Snoqualmie Indian Tribe Treaty Rights and passing on the Traditions and Culture of the Tribe to the next Generations. She has been married for 33 years to her husband Tom, they have 3 daughters, 5 grandchildren and 1 great-granddaughter. Chairwoman Lubenau and her extended Snoqualmie family members are active in traditional fishing, hunting and gathering throughout the Pacific Northwest.